

Dear FCC,

Please do not let the business requesting to change Indiana Do Not Call law to benefit them. It is so peaceful to not put up with stupid phone calls from solicitors.

A few months ago I had some idiot from Enterprise Car Rental who wouldn't leave me alone. Enterprise thought the number he was dialing was for a delinquent customer and he must have called me 10 times trying to reach the customer. I told him he had the wrong number. I told him the number he gave me was my number and the customer or clerk must have entered the wrong number. Each time he said he wouldn't bother me again...well, every couple of days this man would call me back like he had no idea who I was and that we hadn't spoken about this issue. I tried to be polite and even look up the "customers" number for him. After so many calls I figured he thought I was lying!!! Finally I had to threaten him with calling the police and attorney general. He never called back.

My point being, is this whole being bothered and constant interruptions are not only annoying but also stressful. I HATE phone solicitors, period. And if the banks and companies actually think calling me will give them my goodwill they are mistaken. And if you think as members of the FCC you are helping your cause with the public in Indiana you are again mistaken. You did the right thing with the Janet Jackson/Timberlake issue...doesn't blow it now with the WHOLE state of Indiana.

There are loopholes in this law now, please don't make a tunnel!!!

Thank you for your vote no in advance. I'm sure YOU personally wouldn't want this nonsense interrupting your days and evening.

Sincerely,

Theresa Bowles
